Weekly Legislative Feature Issues:

The Legislature Gets to Work on Responding to Governor Malloy's Proposed Budget

Last Wednesday, Governor Malloy released his proposed biennial budget for FY18 and FY19. The Appropriations Committee began its budgeting process on Tuesday, February 14th with the commencement of the Appropriations Committee's agency budget presentations and public hearings, which will continue through the end of next week. These presentations and hearings provide the state executive agencies as well as the public with the opportunity to present their cases to the committee charged with deciding what expenditures are vital to Connecticut moving forward. Once the presentation and hearing process concludes, the Appropriations Committee will produce its own budget proposal that will be negotiated and amended throughout the remainder of the session.

2017 Legislative Session in the News:

Legislators begin to push back on Malloy's new budget:

"The General Assembly began its review of Gov. Dannel P. Malloy's new two-year budget Friday with a strong, bipartisan pushback from the Appropriations Committee."

Following the release of Governor Malloy's proposed budget for the FY18-FY19 biennium, members of the General Assembly from both sides of the aisle came together to challenge the proposals reallocating local aid, raise taxes, and over reliance on state employee concessions to close the $1.68 billion gap in the budget.

No one wants a share of CT's teacher pension bill:

"In Malloy's new two-year budget proposal the teachers' pension bill is the hot potato."

Governor Malloy's proposed budget underscores the view that state government cannot continue to bear the burden of paying teachers' pension costs, which are expected to explode over the next 15 years. Malloy's budget seeks to distribute these costs to municipalities, hospitals, and the federal government.

Coventry Town Manager John Elsesser argued in a tweet, “We didn’t break it, why should we buy it?” in response to the proposal of shifting one-third of the teachers’ pension obligations to municipalities. This fiscal year, Connecticut must make a $1 billion contribution, which would translate to municipalities across the state being on the hook for $320 million this fiscal year and $421 million in the second fiscal year of the two-year budget.

House chairwoman of the Appropriations Committee, Rep. Toni Walker, replied that she was not surprised at this reaction. She made assurances that the committee will be researching each issue to understand all the impacts of the governor’s proposal before producing the legislature’s own budget proposal.

Make Springfield-Boston rail a priority, says Connecticut Gov. Dannel Malloy

Governor Malloy wrote in a January 30th letter to Massachusetts Governor Charley Baker, “Improved transportation connections will only strengthen our communities and increase economic growth significantly.”

The governor urged his MA contemporary to consider adding this vital link for the Knowledge Corridor to Hartford, New Haven, and New York City, which would provide frequent and reliable service to Boston.

While there is support from both the state-level in Massachusetts as well as within their federal delegation, there has yet to be a response from Governor Baker on whether this is amenable to his current agenda.
