2017 Legislative Session

Weekly Legislative Feature Issues:

The Budget Remains at the Forefront of the Legislature's Collective Mind

The 2017 Legislative Session is only three weeks old and the general assembly continues to move bills through the legislative process, but everyone's mind remains focused on the upcoming budget proposal that Governor Malloy is set to release on Wednesday, February 8, 2017. Last Friday, January 20, 2017, it was announced that due to several developments, there is a projected budget surplus of $23.3 million for the current state fiscal year. Even if this projection holds and the state fiscal year ends in the black, the legislature still faces a $1.42 billion deficit in SFY 2017-18 and a $1.6 billion shortfall in SFY 2018-19. While the projected surplus is certainly good news, there is still a lot of work to do moving forward.

2017 Legislative Session in the News:

OPM Projects a $23.3 million budget surplus for SFY 16-17

Last Friday, the Office of Policy and Management announced in its monthly report to State Comptroller Kevin Lembo that it now projected a $23.3 million budget surplus, which it attributed in part to a one-time lawsuit settlement payment of $31.5 million and an upgrade in projected General Fund tax receipts of $25 million.

This is a significant development if the projection holds since last month, state budget analysts projected a $41.6 million. House Speaker Aresimowicz remarked, "It is a good sign that the budget continues to stabilize, and our main focus can turn to the 2018-19 budget years."

State is Exploring Funding Options to Assist Homeowners Impacted by Crumbling Foundations

On Tuesday, January 24, 2017, it was announced that the governor will be asking for $5 million in state funding to assist homeowners in 24 towns in northeastern Connecticut whose homes may be crumbling because of a mineral that causes foundations to deteriorate.

The funding, if approved by the State Bond Commission, will be used to test and include visual inspections of foundations to better understand the extent of the problem while also assisting property owners with the costs related to testing.

In addition to the $5 million in bond funding that Governor Malloy is seeking, the Connecticut Department of Housing is also planning to allocation an additional $1 million in federal block grant funding to further assist low- and moderate-income homeowners with testing costs.

It bears noting that there are a number of proposed bills regarding crumbling foundations. We will continue tracking these bills. There is sure to be a public hearing on the topic.

Congressman Larson Explains His Vision for Transportation Infrastructure Development in Hartford

Yesterday evening, Congressman Larson explained his plan to develop a vast network of tunnels for highways and how their interchange would free up hundreds of acres in the city and East Hartford, recapture Hartford’s riverfront and reunite the north and south ends.

State Senator John Fonfara remarked that “The image of this is so exciting – our city not being controlled by these highway systems that just destroy the quality of life.”
