7. What's New in My Town

The following town/organization updates were given:

Bike/Walk CT: an accessibility data bill has been proposed, with Elizabeth Esty as co-sponsor. It would provide a new data source for MPOs.

Granby: a new traffic light at 202 and the FCHT has been installed. Three more trail counters have been purchased and new trail maps have been released.

Watch for Me CT: the statewide trail census program is ongoing and a webinar about it is scheduled for April 3.

Southington: section of the FCHT at Curtis Street should be completed in the summer. Design for the last section of the trail should be done in the Fall with a target date for completion of construction in the Spring of 2020.

Farmington: official opening of the final section of the FCHT in Farmington should happen soon.

Bolton: a ribbon-cutting for the trail bridge project will happen in September.

New Britain: the Stanley trail project will be underway soon. The city is designing a trail loop to connect the two parks. The city continues to look for opportunities to create bike lanes during routine milling and paving. The city will hold a bike rodeo on June 23. $2 million dollars has been allocated for phase 7 of the city's complete streets plan (on Columbus Blvd). The Beehive Bridge project has also gotten city approval.

Bike New Britain: signed a lease for a downtown headquarters. The organization is also working to bring back the Hardware City Bike Tour. The group has also been approached about constructing mountain bike trails in city parks.

Wethersfield: the town has completed installation of nine bus shelters. Annual bike festival is on June 10 in Old Wethersfield. The town is also getting ready for its first bike/ped planning process.

Mansfield: finished development of a bike safety card and is attempting to get them distributed to UConn students. Tony Cherolis mentioned that Champaign-Urbana has a program where incoming students receive safety training during registration. Next goal in Mansfield is bicycle friendly university status for UConn.

Canton: streetscape project in Collinsville is ongoing. Phase 2 is underway and a public meeting will be held on April 4.

Hartford (BiCiCo): holding workshops on Mondays and Wednesday nights. Transport Hartford got a 1 year grant from the national safety council for community outreach and an internship focused around public safety. Some physical traffic calming interventions will also be done.

West Hartford: the town is hoping to add bike lanes on Boulevard. They are also working on a connection to Newington to link up with the fastrak trail. Phase 3 of the Trout Brook Trail is going into construction. The town is working on three recreational trail loops with decorative signs and family friendly routes.

Manchester: the town adopted a complete streets plan last summer. They are acquiring a stretch of the cheney railroad to connect the historic district to the Hop River Trail. They are almost done with a wayfinding sign system in downtown, along with four new bus stops. The parks and rec department is starting a “yellow bike program” at Charter Oak Park. People with a recreation pass will be able to borrow a bike and use it for a few hours.
