- Steve Sullivan's biography

Biography

Steve Sullivan is President, Connecticut Electric Operations for Eversource Energy. He oversees electric operations and system maintenance in the state, manages Connecticut storm response efforts, and leads a dedicated, cross-functional team tasked with addressing the needs of customers in Connecticut. Steve assumed his current role in December 2021. He is responsible for safe, reliable everyday delivery of electricity in Connecticut, as well as helping to advance the state's clean energy future. Steve works closely with Regulatory Affairs, Community Affairs, Information Technology, Corporate Communications and other Eversource departments. He is committed to earning the confidence and trust of our customers, the business community and elected leaders across Connecticut. Steve has more than 30 years of experience with Eversource and predecessor companies. Before taking his current role, he served as Vice President of Transmission Project Management and Construction, overseeing transmission line and substation projects, which strengthen the transmission system and enable the adoption of new renewable energy across Eversource's three-state service area. Steve also has extensive electric distribution knowledge, including system operations and system restoration. Steve holds a bachelor's degree in Civil Engineering from Tufts University. He lives in Tolland, Connecticut with his wife, Janet.
